mr. harold petty

The DORIAN staff would like to dedicate this page and this year's DORIAN to Mr. Harold Petty who is retiring this year after 25 years service at Lakeview High School. It is impossible to measure the contributions made by Mr. Petty to education at Lakeview and just as impossible to express sufficient gratitude. Our best wishes for his retirement years go with him.

the 1990s, the number of people in the world who are under 15 years of age is expected to increase from 1.1 billion to 1.5 billion.

There are a number of reasons why the number of children in the world is expected to increase. One of the main reasons is the high birth rate in many developing countries. In these countries, women often have many children because they do not have access to family planning services.

Another reason is the high life expectancy in many developing countries. People are living longer, which means that there are more children in the world.

There are also a number of other factors that contribute to the increase in the number of children in the world. These include the high death rate in many developing countries, which means that more children are needed to replace the parents who die.

Finally, there is the issue of migration. Many people are moving from developing countries to developed countries, which means that there are more children in the world.

The increase in the number of children in the world is a major challenge for the world's leaders. They need to find ways to provide education and healthcare for all children.

One of the ways to do this is to improve family planning services in developing countries. This will help women to have fewer children, which will reduce the number of children in the world.

Another way to do this is to improve education and healthcare in developing countries. This will help children to live longer and healthier lives, which will reduce the number of children in the world.

Finally, there is the issue of migration. Leaders need to find ways to help people who are moving from developing countries to developed countries. This will help to reduce the number of children in the world.
