Proposed local study item submitted by Mrs. Paul Reeder (Viola) which was tabled at Decatur, Illinois, Annual Meeting, April 8, 1964:

A study to determine how public opinion formation can be fostered in our community.

Mrs. Reeder explained as follows -

The meaning of public opinion is set forth in the following statements: -

1. The objects of opinion lie beyond the immediate sphere of needs and wants (private, futile). They are concerned with values which are the sources of community (public, enduring).
2. The objects of opinion have to do with political, historical community; considerations of private morality, therefore are not relevant.
3. Public opinion means opinion hammered out by debate among opposing factions so that differences are reconciled as much as possible.
4. Public opinion, since it is meant to be represented, must serve as a guide for action. That is, it must be based on political principles derived from historical reality.

I mean by public opinion formation, then, the activities and experiences of man as a citizen. This experience, as well as individual moral experiences and private family experiences, have ^{been} almost destroyed by the rise of "society."

My difficulty presenting this item and yours in understanding it are an indication of this loss of experience.

Most of the League's items are oriented toward society and the needs of life. In order to counter this, I ask for an item which redefines politics, searches for political principles, and looks for ways to foster political experience.
